Management Update: In the hunt for HRs

BRW September 18-24 2008 P.50

Listed human resources and recruitment group Chandler Macleod has launched a specialist recruitment business focusing on the HR sector. The new firm, CMHR, will be headed by executive general manager Chris Le Coic, who says strong demand for HR recruitment services reflects the continuation of the skills shortage despite the slowing economy. "We are currently experiencing rare market conditions where there is an economic slowdown, but it has not weakened demand for quality candidates nor has it eased the skills shortage," Le Coic says. "This unusual environment is helping to elevate the status of HR as many businesses are recognising that the HR function is now even more critical to long-term business success." CMHR has offices in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane and Perth.
